Engagement

User value

The act of signing in has no inherent value

Some user experiences are best when they are never “experienced”

Authenticated
experiences
have a high value

Signing in is a pain

Your product on the other side is the prize

Aim:

Pain < Prize

A lot of pain

= Barbed wire

The case study: our old auth flow

How did we know
our authentication
was painful?

1. Analyzing support tickets

2. Detailed monitoring of authentication endpoints

3. Usability tests

4. Tracking the conversion funnel

What was the nature of the pain we found?

Traps:

A punishment for entering an expected situation that is not ideal

Example Trap:

Forgetting your
password

Forgetting your password is normal

Avoid traps:

Expect common
non-ideal situations

Doubled-edged sword:

A feature that is meant to protect you, but can also hinder you

Example doubled-edged sword:

Confirmation
modals

Example doubled-edged sword:

Passwords

Having trouble signing in?

Passwordless sign-
in is as secure as password reset

Avoid doubled-edged sword:

Keep the protection,
remove the
hinderance

Russian roulette:

Forcing someone to make a choice that might be wrong ... or not

Example of Russian roulette:

Making people
choose whether they want to sign in or create an account

We prompt the user
to identify themselves first

Example Russian roulette:

Making people pick
a unique display
name during account creation

Avoid Russian roulette:

Remove risky
decisions

Friendly fire:

When your systems cause errors for the user that are no fault of their own

Example of friendly fire:

Wrong assumptions
about names

Example of friendly fire:

Wrong assumptions
about email
addresses

Avoid friendly fire:

Look at error logs
and fix bugs

Crossed wires:

When users misunderstand what they are doing

Example of crossed wires:

People started to create an account,
but ended up
signing in

Confusing language:

sign in / sign up

We changed to:
sign in / create
account

Avoid crossed wires:

Make choices
distinct

What do you
measure to see if you reduced the pain?

What do you
measure to see the
pain?

Volume of support tickets

A cinnamon roll is placed on a white, square paper doily. The doily has a red stamp that says 'THANK YOU' in a stylized font. Below the stamp, the text 'SOUNDCLOUD.COM' is visible in a smaller font. The background is a solid blue color.

Thank you!
